SOUND REASONING

To The Editor:
I am in receipt of several communications from Representative Colmer and the United States Public Health Service which I think may be of interest to all of the residents of Hancock County. This correspondence is concerned with the problem of mosquito and pest control in Hancock County, and it is too detailed to go into thoroughly in a letter, but I will try to summarize its gist, in the hopes that some interested citizens will take action on the Health Department's recommendations.

Mr. Colmer sent me a letter enclosing the report which Mr. H. M. Jones, Assistant State Director of the Public Health Bureau sent him, pursuant to an investigation which he made at my request last month. The report reads: "In contacting Mrs. Samuel she was of the opinion that the salt-marsh mosquito was the dominating pest... this is not, in our opinion, the case... the mosquitoes that are breeding within the town limits are the real trouble... The area is extremely flat and some ditches have been filled and mosquito larvae can be seen by the thousands..."

Mr. Jones sent me the outline for a city pest control program that would be feasible for Hancock County, if the county and the townships will cooperate to carry out the program. In this program, we would be well repaid, in health, pleasure and hard work, if we gave the matter our most serious consideration.

Yours truly,
ADALINE K. SAMUEL
Medical Director in Charge
Communicable Disease Center
U. S. Public Health Service
Fourth Floor
50 Seventh Street, N. E.
Atlanta 5, Georgia
Attention: Mr. Roy F. Fritz, Scientist
Malaria Control Section
Engineering Services

Reference is made to your letter of May 2 and 17, 1951, relative to a mosquito problem in Waveland, Mississippi and to Mrs. E. C. Samuel's correspondence with Honorable William M. Colmer, House of Representatives, regarding same.

This complaint was new to the office, but not to the local county health department.

An investigation was made of the matter on May 23, 1951.

Last year the Town of Bay St. Louis inaugurated a DDT spraying program which became very popular with the citizens. The Mississippi State Board of Health furnished the DDT, and all other equipments, materials and labor were furnished locally. It is my understanding that a few citizens of Waveland contacted the Bay St. Louis officials regarding using the machine in Waveland. The State Board of Health agreed to furnish the additional requirements of DDT, but Waveland would not furnish the diesel oil and labor or appropriate funds to offset this cost, and the proposal failed to be carried out.

In contacting Mrs. Samuel she was of the opinion that the salt-marsh mosquito was the predominant pest in and around Waveland. This species, according to our opinion, is not the cause of complaint. It is true that they might occasionally have an influx of the salt-marsh variety, but the real trouble is the mosquitoes that are breeding within the town limits, principally, culex.

This area is extremely flat. Some ditches have no fall and mosquito larvae can be seen by the thousands. This area has no sewerage disposal system and septic tanks are generally used. During certain seasons of the year the effluent of these tanks offers ideal breeding places.

On my visit to this area I explained the component parts of a mosquito control program. We are forwarding the local officials, through the county health department, a prospectus on insect control programs. Those concerned are going to try and get the town officials to act on this matter and it is possible that I will be called upon to attend an official meeting regarding this matter in the near future.

The undertaking of controlling these areas by use of aircraft would indeed be costly. After the hurricane of 1947, we SDC furnished the DDT and the Department of Agriculture in Gulfport furnished the plans and pilot who was an entomologist. This was undertaken as a fly control project and not a mosquito project. Marine grasses and numerous animal carcasses were readily available for the breeding of Stomoxys calcitrans and other species. It is purely coincidental that after the area was treated by air in 1947 that they weren't bothered with mosquitoes during 1948, 1949, and 1950.

This office will continue to cooperate with them on this problem and we will keep you informed as to the developments.

By direction of the State Director.

Very truly yours,
H. M. JONES
Assistant State Director.

—Mrs. Moises Garcia left Tuesday for Mexico City for a two weeks visit with relatives.

Deflating Government

Seventy-five representatives of Mississippi agricultural and industrial organizations met in Jackson in June and endorsed a six-point program for controlling inflation on a nation-wide level.

The program adopted includes a substantial reduction in federal spending, the elimination of federal waste, the termination of price and wage controls, a balanced federal budget, "pay as you go", selective credit controls to stop the flow of unneeded dollars in the economic system and the encouragement of saving by individuals.

It all boils down to the horse-sensical idea that both the government and the individual should live with in their incomes—spending only what is necessary and saving the difference.

The Federal Government cannot expect the citizen to practice thrift while it squanders our substance; while it raises taxes, to spend more, to raise taxes, to spend more.

There is no use to talk about controlling inflation unless the Government itself can be controlled. It is foolish to talk about controlling credit and controlling the people unless the Government will control itself, and there is no control in a free country like self-control.

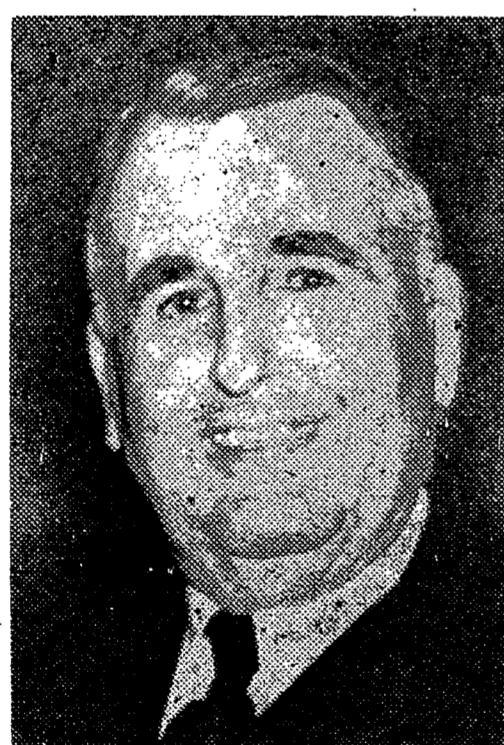

When a Government becomes so extravagant that it advocates higher taxes as a cure for inflation, it is high time to begin deflating the Government. And the only way to deflate the Government is to curtail its revenue.

There is pending today a proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution to repeal the 16th Amendment legalizing the collection of income taxes by limiting the amount the Federal Government can collect to 25 percent of the taxpayer's income.

The legislature of Mississippi was one of the first to vote in favor of this limitation. Already 22 state legislatures have voted in favor of it. When 32 states shall have voted for it, two-thirds of the states, a Constitutional Convention will be called by the Congress to make the 25 percent limitation constitutionally legal.

So something is being done to keep the Federal Government out of the peoples' pockets and control Federal inflation. If some control is not forthcoming soon on the Federal Government's grasping and spending, we are on our way to national bankruptcy, for America's prosperity was built on industry and frugality.
